

Are you doing your part?

Jihad is not a spectator sport.

An individual brick is very weak on its own, easily breakable, light and can be easily moved, however placed together with other bricks with mortar holding them together this wall of individual bricks becomes an extremely sturdy structure that is not easy to move, and our deen can somewhat be compared to this analogy by looking at the bricks as individual Muslims and the mortar can be Aqeedah, so when the individual Brother finds other Brothers upon the same Aqeedah, its this which unites them and makes them 1 fierce force to contend with, they know their obligation to fight for the sake of Allah, and they all do their part, everyone brings their skills to the Jihad including trades like welding, electricians and millwrights to computer tech to audio visual and even past military and accountants as you need someone to look after the financial war booty and properly use the funds.

The point is every single Brother should fulfill his duty towards this Jihad, no matter how small or irrelevant that he make think his contribution is, he should lend himself to adding to the wall, Allah did not bless you with such skills to help yourself or look like a big shot in the dunya to all your friends and so you can show off to the people in your town.

These skills should be used to help the Ummah first, as we are currently waging a war with the kuffar in response to their initial attack on Islam, it would be better for a DR to help his brothers in battle or tend to the sick and wounded in the towns, the rewards are much better in the end, but instead we see these Doctor's just getting clinics in towns of the mushriks, helping them and turning their backs on the Ummah, they want the Porsche with license plate that says MD and big house and everyone to look at him as a huge success, but in fact in the eyes of Allah, your a loser, the homeless man with no education who decides to join the ranks has a million more rewards and is looked on more favourably in Allah's sight.

The kuffar and murtad leaders of this world have tried desperately to break this wall into individual bricks, this way it easier to deal with, easier to manipulate and lastly easier to break. They have spent trillions trying to change and mould an Islam that suits the kuffar in turn making the dunya look like paradise and true Islamic principals are something of the dark-ages, that we need to get with the times per say, well we can surely see how that is working out in Palestine, how many times can you be slapped in the face before you duck and hit back? When it comes to funerals thousands come out to attend yelling and protesting, how about those same thousands start picking up weapons of any type and and attack? Why not have those same thousands fly under 1 flag? How can there be so many groups with the same mission but not unite? It's clear to me that they are many bricks but they are missing the basic mortar of Aqeedah which will connect them all, it's missing and it's as plain for all to see.

This is why everyone needs to do their part, sitting on the sidelines yelling empty threats or dressing up like commandos is not going to liberate these areas, the sword is!!! As an old Scottish military commander said in the time of the sword "Borders are not defended by policy, rather they are defended by the sword" This is what made the Mujahideen the most fearful opponents on the battlefields, they gave a warning and if that warning was not respected, everyone went to war, if one was not present in battle and did not have an excuse, he would be looked upon as a munafiq, and I believe this as well, one needs to participate in which ever part of this Jihad he can lend himself too.

If closing, if we look at a well operation of a motor, each piece needs to work for the entire motor to run smoothly, even down to the smallest of nut, bolt, washer or pin anything broken or missing the engine does not run smooth, missing of bigger parts now the whole engine may fail, so by us all doing our part to help in this fight and with the aid of Allah subhana wa ta ala assistance we will be successful, we have been fighting this Jihad for well over 1400 years, it's not going to stop with smooth negotiations or deals or treaties, the enemies of Islam have no intention of stopping, and by Allah's aid we will never stop fighting them back with any means possible, but that can only be done if we all do our part inshallah khair.

To those whom are doing their part may Allah keep you strong, steadfast and may HE be merciful too you if you meet your end, as this is a noble cause, this walk is those of our prior beginnings, the fight has not ended because our so-called Muslim leaders say so, we continue until the LAST DAY !!!!
